1 - Still now	Watchman WATCHMAN Duties and Responsibilities: Sometimes called security officers, night watchmen, watchmen or patrolmen, security guards all essentially share the same responsibilities. The general purpose of a security guard is protection of the people and property of the organization where they work. Guards will routinely inspect the property for any suspicious activities. This is to head off would-be criminal or malicious activity, such as vandalism, arson, theft and illegal drug deals. Security guards often are private employees of the property manager or the owner of the business. Since security guards and watchmen are the first law enforcement personnel on the scene, some guards carry arms. Therefore, they must comply with all gun safety regulations. Watchmen are also responsible for communicating with agencies such as fire and ambulance services in cases of fire or personal injury.
